

Additionally, five resident-taught tasks were determined to require enhancement:

MP reports and forms

Apprehension and search

Protect a crime scene

Respond to and secure the scene of a traffic accident

Use of force

It is important to note that all of the tasks listed in both these groups were validated by a MACOM PM Site Selection Executive Board which met at the USAMPS in August 1983. All tasks requiring enhancement have been or will be acted upon in some manner; however, due to a high degree of field interest, selected highlights of the MP reports and forms module enhancement are:

A detailed homework assignment (DA Form 3975)

More note-taking in class

A GTA on DA Form 3975 (worldwide distribution mid/late 84/85)

MP notebooks for class work

Use of actual cases as teaching points

A MP-unique police notebook

Coincidental with these LETF actions, the USAMPS undertook a separate but related initiative to review the training strategy for Civil Disturbance training presented to the OSUT MP trainee. The resultant revision of the training strategy involved the addition of three non-resident Skill Level I tasks to be taught in residence:

Conduct a vehicle search (law enforcement task)

React to sniper fire (combat support task)

Take immediate action upon being warned of an explosive device (combat support task)

Previously, Phase II (OSUT) Military Police Skill Level I training consisted of 264.5 hours devoted to teaching 102 tasks. With the implementation of these additional three days of law enforcement training and completion of all enhancement, this training now consists of 282.5 hours devoted to teaching 112 tasks, as shown in Figure 2.

Many of the revisions and new initiatives undertaken by the U.S. Army Military Police School are done so as the result of field input. These actions all have one common goal — to develop a better-trained military police soldier. Continued input from all elements of the Military Police Corps is required if high standards are to be maintained. [MPJ]
